MONDAY MORNING, JUNE [illegible] 1862

The Indian Appropriation Bill

This bill was up for consideration in the Senate on the [illegible] of April. It contained several appropriations for the Indian Department on this coast—among them one for appropriating fifty thousand dollars for the purpose of negotiating a treaty to purchase the Nez Perces Reservation; another appropriating twenty thousand dollars to pay the outstanding claims against the Indian Department in Oregon and Washington Territory; another appropriating twenty thousand dollars for the purpose of negotiating a treaty with the Shoshones or Snake River Indians. Much opposition was made to these appropriations. The second named proposition was [illegible] amendment, was decided out of order. The others were agreed to. Senator Nesmith defended the necessity of these appropriations in a very felicitous manner—showing the fact that he had a thorough knowledge of Indian affairs on this coast, and he [illegible] to show up the wrongs inflicted upon the Indians by sending to them, in compliance with treaty stipulations, worthless goods [illegible] from the East. We entirely concur in all Senator Nesmith said upon this point in the Senate. We trust the imposition and wrong upon the Indians will not be repeated.

We shall take occasion, hereafter, to give a further notice of Senator Nesmith's remarks upon the items of appropriation named.

The Anti-Polygamy Law.—The late Eastern papers contain copies of this law. The following is a synopsis of its provisions. It provides that every person having a husband or wife living who shall marry another person, whether married or single, in any territory of the United States, or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, shall be adjudged guilty of bigamy and punished by fine and imprisonment, except in cases where such person by reason of a former marriage whose husband or wife by such marriage, shall be absent five years, without being known to said person as still living. The bill repeals all acts of the Utah Legislature which establish or countenance polygamy, evasively called spiritual marriage, however disguised by ecclesiastical formalities. The bill also provides that no organization for religious or charitable purposes shall be entitled to hold real estate in any territory during the existence of Territorial Government of greater value than one hundred thousand dollars."

This law will be carried into effect if necessary, by all the means at the command of Government.

Every American citizen, native or naturalized, can now select a piece of land from Uncle Samuel's Domains, on which he can make a home for himself and family. The second year of Mr Lincoln's Administration is thus signalized by giving every man a farm. Come, ye poor, from every where, from any part of this broad land—from any part of Europe, and declare your intention to become a citizen and select lands for your homes. There are many choice spots in Oregon not taken up, and many as fine [illegible] in Washington Territory as the sun ever shone upon.

A Number of [illegible] Contractors [illegible] of the Portsmouth (N. H.) Navy Yard are engaged upon a series of plans demonstrating the feasibility of converting the 74 gun line of battle ship Alabama, for many years lying on the stocks, into a steam ram.

The thief [illegible] has published [illegible] for running away from [illegible] came to the conclusion that the [illegible] likely to be bagged, and he [illegible] own men as slyly as possible [illegible] a great horror of [illegible].

The Investment of Charleston

The following report [illegible] Fort Bridger, 100 miles [illegible] Salt Lake, [illegible] then telegraphed to Sacramento [illegible] June 2 [illegible]

Cairo, June 8th.—The packet Platte Valley arrived this morning direct from Memphis. [illegible] consisting of five gunboats and [illegible] Fort Wright at two o'clock [illegible] morning. They [illegible] about two miles above Memphis [illegible] the same evening. [illegible] was made and the enemy's [illegible] lying [illegible] the city. During the night the rebel fleet moved down the river. [illegible] were coming up [illegible] Our gunboats [illegible] followed by the rams [illegible] toward the rebel fleet. The first shot [illegible] range by [illegible] Federal gunboat [illegible] which [illegible] replied with a broadside. The engagement became general. The Federal ram Monarch struck the rebel [illegible] at [illegible] cutting her nearly in two [illegible] full and sunk. The rebel ram [illegible] made a dash at the Monarch [illegible] however succeeded in getting out of the way of the blow intended for her [illegible] boat Gen Price taking away [illegible] wheel and making it necessary to run her ashore [illegible] sent a shot which struck the rebel boat Gen Lovell, rendering her unmanageable. Immediately after the Lovell was run down by the Federal ram Queen of the West. [illegible] from the Beaut [illegible] sides of the Jeff Thompson firing [illegible] burned to the water's edge. The remainder of the rebel fleet returned down the river pursued by our boats. The result was the capture of three rebel gunboats, which had been abandoned by their crews. Captain Montgomery, the rebel flag officer, and most of the officers and men escaped. The Federal ram Lancaster was slightly disabled during the engagement.

Colonel Ellet who commanded the Federal rams was struck in the breast by a splinter and stunned but soon recovered. This was the only casualty on our side. Our rams were manned by sharpshooters who did good execution in picking off the enemy's gunners. The rebel loss in killed, wounded and missing is heavy but not yet ascertained.

After the return of our boats from the pursuit Commodore Davis sent a note to the Mayor of Memphis demanding the surrender of the city. The Mayor replied that the force of circumstances placed the city in his (Davis') hands. A boat was immediately sent ashore and the national flag raised over the Post Office. No demonstration was made. It was not reported that it would be necessary to declare martial law. Five steamers lying at the wharf were captured.

Philadelphia, June 9th.—The following dispatches are from Southern papers:

"Charleston, (S. C.) June [illegible]—The Federal gunboats are moving up within range of our batteries. The greatest excitement prevails as the gunboats are in sight. Every [illegible] is expressed in General [illegible] ability to drive off the invaders."

Charleston, (S. C.) June 4th.—The enemy landed this morning 2,000 strong, at James Island opposite the city. A battle took place and the enemy were repulsed. Twenty men are taken prisoners. There is still heavy firing in the direction of James Island. It is rumored that one hundred more of the Yankees were captured.

Prisoners taken say that the enemy have landed 1,700 troops on Battery Island and [illegible] Island. They are now in front of General [illegible] in force under cover of the gunboats. An advance is imminent.

Chicago, June 13th.—The following was just received from Headquarters, June 8th: The army left Harrisonburg on the 6th. This morning at half past eight o'clock, the advance engaged the rebels seven miles from that place. The enemy were very advantageously posted in timber, having had time to choose their position. Their troops were formed en masse and consisted undoubtedly of Jackson's entire force. The battle began with heavy firing at eleven and lasted with great obstinacy and violence until four o'clock. Some skirmishing and artillery [illegible] from that time till dark. Our troops fought at times under a murderous fire of greatly superior numbers—the hottest of small arm firing on the left. Bayonets and musters [illegible] were freely used by our men with great effect on the enemy. The loss on both sides is very great. Ours is very heavy among the officers. We are encamped on the field of battle. The fight may be renewed at any moment.

Chicago, June 11th.—A private dispatch [illegible] in this city today from [illegible] says General Mitchell won a brilliant victory at Chattanooga, Tenn. The enemy were completely routed after two days hard fighting.

Chicago, June 12.—The report that Mitchell won a battle at Chattanooga, telegraphed yesterday, is doubtless false. Dispatches from Huntsville [illegible] yesterday make no mention of it. The dispatch from which the report was taken yesterday came from an [illegible] and was considered reliable.

Washington, June 13.—Advices received by the War Department state that [illegible] army attacked Shields' advance in Morning, June 8th, near Port Republic, [illegible] Rockingham county, Virginia. The [illegible] maintained [illegible] time but the rebels were in such overwhelming numbers that our [illegible] were compelled to [illegible] when the rebels were driven back [illegible] fighting is said to have been very severe [illegible] loss [illegible] A private [illegible] destroyed a large amount of [illegible] supplies at [illegible] river [illegible] away the bridges over the [illegible]

Invention of Cotton.—At the close of the Revolution cotton was not raised in the United States [illegible]. In 1790 [illegible] exported. At that [illegible] inventions destined to give an impetus to cotton culture were in their infancy. In Europe the "jenny" of Arkwright and the steam engine of Watt were [illegible]. The gin of Whitney was invented in 179[illegible]

Present to the King of Denmark.—Three [illegible] pair of Colt's revolvers nearly finished at [illegible] Armory at Hartford, which are [illegible] by the President of the United States to the King of Denmark. The pistols are of the improved army pattern, and in the most superb manner and elegantly mounted with gold.

It is reported that President Lincoln has said that he would rather raise a fresh army of a million men rather than submit to any [illegible]. If he did say so, he only anticipated the universal sentiment of the people.—B.

A Port Royal letter in the New York Herald says:

"The contrabands who came up by the Planter represent that the feeling in Charleston approaches nearer to a panic than at any time since the rebellion was inaugurated.—The women and children have been ordered out of the place, and have taken whatever of value they could carry with them. The troops are in constant expectation of an attack, and the remaining citizens are nightly holding meetings to devise further means of defense. The steamers in the harbor are seven in number; but only one of them—the Marion—is armed, and she is not capable of doing any damage or offering any resistance to an attacking force. Provisions are terribly scarce and dear."

On the 12th, Provost Marshall Hagood warned the people of Charleston that all the salt owned in the city should at once be delivered to the military authorities. The removal of salt from the city is strictly forbidden, under pains and penalties.

A free market is in operation at Charleston. Richard Yeadon is chairman of the Executive Committee which has it in charge.

Eleven blockading vessels of the Federal fleet were off Charleston on the 11th of May.

The Raleigh (N. C.) Standard has a strong article against the conscription ordered by the rebel Congress at Richmond. It says:

"There is no good reason for urging a levy en masse upon the people; and it is both wicked and dangerous to attempt to force free men to do what they have been doing and will do voluntarily. We are inflexibly opposed to calling into the field, as hireling soldiers, all our fighting men between 18 and 35, and then disarming the rest of the population, as proposed by the President in his 'request' to Major Ashe. Our liberties might not, in the end, be destroyed by such a course; but we are not willing to trust any man or any government of delegated powers, under any circumstances, with the exercise of such a power. The price of liberty is eternal vigilance.

THE SECOND LARGEST STEAMER IN THE WORLD.—The Great Eastern was in New York May 27th, and at the same time the new Cunarder, the Scotia, which is next to her in size, and which had just made her first trip to that port. Her length is 400 feet, her breadth between the mouldings 47 feet 6 inches, and her depth 32 feet.

HINT TO HOUSEWIVES.—Coal oil is said to be a sure destroyer of bedbugs. Apply plentifully with a small brush or a feather to the places where they do most congregate. The cure is effectual and permanent. Gilt frames, chandeliers, &c., rubbed slightly over with coal oil, will not be disturbed by flies.

A Paris correspondent says, in explanation of the present attitude of France: "If the truth must be told, the decided ill will of a large and powerful party in France towards the Union cause, dates from the admission of the Orleans Princes into the Federal service."

GOOD AS HIS WORD.—Governor Johnson, of Tennessee is as good as his word, and that's as good as a king's bond. A Union soldier was recently fired at in Murfreesboro by concealed foes, and for this twelve Secessionists were arrested, including a brother of Mrs. ex President Polk, and taken to Nashville, where they are held in custody.

☞ COUGHS.—The sudden changes of our climate are sources of PULMONARY, BRONCHIAL, and ASTHMATIC AFFECTIONS. Experience having proved that simple remedies often act speedily and certainly when taken in the early stages of the disease, recourse should at once be had to "Brown's Bronchial Troches," or lozenges, let the Cold, Cough, or Irritation of the Throat be ever so slight, as by this precaution a more serious attack may be effectually warded off. PUBLIC SPEAKERS and SINGERS will find them effectual for clearing and strengthening the voice. See advertisement.

The Star Spangled Banner.

Oh! say can you see by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming,
Whose stripes and bright stars, through the perilous fight
O'er the ramparts we watched were so gallantly streaming
And the rocket's red glare, the bombs bursting in the air
Gave proof through the night that our flag was still there
Oh! say does that star spangled banner yet wave,
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave

On the shore dimly seen through the mist of the deep
Where the foe's haughty host in dread silence reposes
What is that which the breeze, o'er the towering steep
As it fitfully blows, half conceals, half discloses
Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam
In full glory reflected now shines on the stream
'Tis the star spangled banner—oh! long may it wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave

And where is that band who so vauntingly swore
That the havoc of war and the battle's confusion
A home and a country would leave us no more
Their blood has washed out their foul footsteps' pollution
No refuge could save the hireling and slave
From the terror of flight or the gloom of the grave
And the star spangled banner in triumph doth wave,
O'er the land of the free, and the home of the brave

Oh! thus be it ever when freemen shall stand
Between their lov'd home and war's desolation
Blest with victory and peace may the heav'n rescued land
Praise the Power that has made and preserved us a nation
Then conquer we must, for our cause it is just
And this be our motto, "In God is our trust"
And the star spangled banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave

How I was Cured of Gaming.

A MIDNIGHT ADVENTURE

(Concluded.)

The Hoosier asked me this question, at the same time pointing to my cheques. I told him "yes." He bought more cheques, and placed a number equal to mine on the queen

"This yer keard must win, sometime," he muttered, as he straightened up his stack of ivory, and then added, glancing at my pile, "an' that yer knave's got to lose afore he's much older."

The dealer began to throw off the cards again. The knave came first, it had won. The queen came next, the banker turned it upon his left hand—the bank won—the Hoosier lost. As before, the cheques which came from the queen were passed over to me

I hesitated, but the spell was upon me, and I could not break it. I piled up the cheques—ninety-six of them—and ventured them upon the knave again. The Hoosier eyed me sharply, and then ventured a like amount upon the queen, at the same time muttering to himself that such luck couldn't last always. Again the cards were laid off, and to the astonishment of all who were watching the game, the knave and the queen came out very near together—the knave to the right, the queen to the left. I had won—the Hoosier had lost. The banker had now taken in my smaller cheques, and gave me in exchange some worth twenty dollars each. My last stake had been four hundred and eighty dollars, and my present pile was consequently nine hundred and sixty.

"Make it a thousand!" whispered the Hoosier.

"Done," I replied, and added two cheques to my accumulated venture.

Again the banker began to throw off his cards, right and left. The knave came up first to the right, I had won. The queen came up to the left—lost. The Hoosier drove his hand into his bosom, and brought forth a pocket book, from which he took a roll of bank notes.

"Go yer two thousand!" he said in a hoarse whisper. "I've got that much."

My first impulse, before he had spoken, had been to do that very thing, but now I hesitated. What had I to do with him? I was not playing with him—I was not betting against him; my play was simply against the banker, and his was the same. I told him as much

"No, no," he said, eagerly. "It's agin luck we're playin'. Them yer two keards is in for it. The knave's yourn, and the queen's mine. Go yer two thousand."

All that I had on the table before me, save one solitary cheque of twenty dollars, I had won; so I had little real risk to run.

"It is done," I said; and down went two thousand dollars upon the knave.

The Hoosier placed his venture upon the queen; there were some cheques and some bank notes, in all two thousand dollars. His hand quivered a little as he pushed the pile forward, and then he turned to watch the movements of the banker.

The cards began to move off once more, and this time the table was surrounded by an eager crowd. There was something novel in the spectacle of two men playing against each other at faro; and it struck me as being excessively novel, too. But it was no doing of mine. The Hoosier seemed to have a superstitious faith that our chances were running together. However, I meant to make this one venture further, and then break the spell, let it be win or lose. Right and left—right and left. The queen came up first—to the left! Lost! The knave came up—to the right! I had won again! I gathered up my gains, and then looked for the Hoosier but he had gone.

"Perhaps you'll try the knave again?" said the banker

I told him "No, I had played enough." I pushed over my cheques, and he gave me the cash for them—some gold, and some bank notes—to the amount of nearly six thousand dollars. I went to the bar, and took a glass of wine, and then started for my boat. The night was dark, and I had a long distance to walk. I looked at my watch as I came through the hall, and found it to be half an hour past midnight. I began to think I had been a fool. But there I was, and I must make the best of my way to the boat. So I started at a brisk walk, intending to strike the Levee near the mint, and then follow the course of the river. I had gone half a mile or so when I heard heavy footsteps behind me. I increased my rate of speed, but the following footsteps still came nearer. I hurried on, but to no effect—the one behind me was not to be out walked. I felt for my pistol but I had none. I had not brought it with me, I had a dirk knife, and that was all. By-and-by the steps sounded so near that I turned to see who it was that thus pursued me. At a distance of only a few yards came a tall, gaunt figure, which I at once recognized by the street lamp. As the dull glare fell upon the ox like form, I knew it was the Hoosier!

I would have started to run but it was too late. He was upon me, and his hand upon my arm. I would have shouted for help, but he might have killed me to stop my noise. I would have drawn my dirk knife, but the show of opposition might only have called the giant's strength down upon me to crush me. My instinct told me to be passive and wait for the worst. We were in a lone one spot with not a light visible, save the few street lamps that sent their sickly rays through the dingy glass, and if the fellow meant to rob me or kill me, I knew not how to help myself.

"Stranger," he said, his voice sounding frightfully low and hollow, "you played agin me to night."

"No," I replied trying to speak plainly—to speak calmly was out of the question—"I had nothing to do with you. I was playing against the bank."

"It's all the same," he continued. "Our luck run together, an' 'twas you agin me, an' me agin you. It don't make no odds now, I'm dead broke. I ain't got a single pic—Hold on! D'ye see this?"

He reached his right hand over his shoulder, and, from beneath his coat, he drew forth the largest, longest, brightest, and most savage looking bowie knife I had ever seen. My knees smote together, and my heart leaped to my throat.

"You've got money," he went on, as he held the gleaming weapon in hand. "You won it—won all. I lost—lost all. I'm dead broke, not a pic. I want enough to get home, I paid twenty dollars in clear yaller gold for this yer toothpick. Give me fifteen dollars on it an' I'll go. Ef ye're a man, ye won't refuse that."

Mercy! What a letting down was that! Instead of seeking my life, the poor fellow had followed me for the purpose of pawning his bowie knife! He was acquainted with none of those whom he had seen at the gaming house, and he had no friends in the city. I feared him no more. As I spoke with him now, I felt that he was a true hearted man.

"If you get fifteen dollars, you will go back to the gaming table again," I said.

His answer was slow but sure—

"I've tried it twice, stranger, an' when I try it again I'll let ye know."

I told the man to come with me.

"Come to my boat," I said "and you shall have the money."

He said, perhaps I'd let him stay on board all night

Of course I would.

As we walked along, I made up my mind just what I would do; and when we reached the boat, I took him to my state-room, and handed him a chair. Said I.—

"My friend I have made a resolution, since we have been walking together; I have resolved that I will gamble no more. While you and I played at the same table you lost $3,000.

"'Xactly," he replied.

"Well," I continued, "I am going to make up to you what you lost. I shall feel better to do so."

The Hoosier started in amazement.

"I do it as much for my sake as for your own." I went on before he could make an answer, "and if I can feel assured that the event has cured both of us, I shall consider it one of the most valuable experiences of my life."

The plain hearted fellow seized my hand, and my offer was accepted; and when he told me that he would never play again, I believed him. He took the money and all he could do in return was to make me accept the bowie knife, and to promise me that he should always remember me with the warmest emotions.

That was several years ago. I have not ventured a dollar at any game of hazard since, nor do I believe my Hoosier friend has done it either. I keep the long, heavy bowie-knife, and I never look upon it but I think how weak my knees were when my gaze rested for the first time upon its gleaming blade.

SEWING MACHINES

ARE UNEQUALLED BY ANY FOR

BEAUTY AND SIMPLICITY OF CONSTRUCTION

—AND—

Efficiency in Working.

A GOOD SEWING MACHINE

SHOULD BE WELL MADE, simple in its construction, and easily kept in order, should make a TIGHT LOCK STITCH alike on both sides of the material, and should sew any and all materials that can be sewed

It should be able to use cotton, thread, or silk, directly from the spool, and to sew from coarse to fine, and from thick to thin with rapidity and without changing the tension. It should also be able to make the tension greater or less, on both the under and upper threads and with uniformity and should have a straight needle, curved ones being liable to break

The needle should have perpendicular motion—this is absolutely necessary for heavy work

It should be able to bind with a binder, hem with a hemmer, should stitch, fell, run and gather, and should be always ready to work

It should be capable of using the same size thread on both sides of the work, and of using different colored thread or silk above or below to correspond with any two colors of cloth to be united

It should be able to make a long or short stitch, and to fasten off the seam, and commence sewing, tightly at the first stitch, and to run easily, and make but little noise.

It should have a wheel feed no others are in constant contact with the work

It should not be liable to get out of order, neither should it require a screw driver or wrench to set the needle

It should not be liable to oil the operator's dress.

It should not form a ridge on the under side, nor ravel.

The undersigned are General Agents for the general supervision of these unrivalled machines for Pacific States and Western Coast of Mexico
